OVERVIEW

Matt Hull is a Pender & Coward shareholder focusing his practice on eminent domain, right of way, and uniform relocation act matters, local government, and waterfront property law. Matt represents government and business clients in litigation matters in both state and federal courts.

Matt regularly represents condemning authorities in eminent domain cases and inverse condemnation claims, and he defends governmental clients against personal injury suits and challenges to administrative agency decisions. He has also represented business clients in land disputes and contract actions. Prior to entering private practice, Matt worked in the Office of the Attorney General of Virginia where he represented the Virginia Marine Resources Commission on matters affecting waterfront property owners and other users of the state's marine resources.
